Highsnobiety city guide berlin

In anticipation of Berlin Fashion Week, we present a 24-hour guide to the cultural ambassador of the German capital. At our headquarters in Berlin, it's fair that Highsnobiety's first 24-hour travel guide should take in the German capital. While you probably want to spend more than just a day exploring a place like this, when your time is limited these are the spots you should make sure you press. Read on how we recommend spending 24 hours in one of Europe's most burgeoning cities. Hotel: Soho House Berlin Torstraße 1 10119 Berlin-MitteAfter Arrival in Berlin, it's time to take up the city centre. Soho House Berlin is located in Mitte, literally middle or centre, located in a beautifully restored Bauhaus building. The 65-room hotel is within walking distance of the city's finest restaurants, bars, cafés and shops, and combines the charm of a boutique hotel with the comforts of a world-class mega-chain. In addition, Soho House Berlin is equipped with 20 apartments and four attics in case you need a little more space. In the north you will find the long-ago gentrified-yet-charming Prenzlauer Berg while the south takes you to the more alternative districts of Kreuzberg and Neukölln. It's time, however, to explore the city centre. Also see: Michelberger Hotel, Amano Hotel, Mari Hotel, Lux 11, Cosmo Hotel, Das StueBreakfast: 3 minutes sur mer Torstraße 167 10115 Berlin-MittelLocated just a few blocks from the hotel, stop at a French restaurant for 3 minutes sur mer and fill up before heading out for the day. A cup of coffee with a plat du jour can be enjoyed indoors or through the pavement, as the weather allows, making the perfect start to your day. Also see: Café Einstein, Edelweiß, Barcom's Deli, Café Fleury, EngelbergSite-Seeing: Reichstag, Brandenburg Gate, Holocaust Memorial Platz der Republik 1 11011 BerlinOnce your energy levels are topped up, it's time to stop at some of the city's must-see sites. Historical buffs enjoy the conveniently located trifecta of the Brandenburg Gate, the Holocaust Memorial and the Reichstag, although along the border Friedrichshain and Kreuzberg you will find the East Side Gallery: a 1.3-km section of the Berlin Wall covered with internationally recognized works of art. Several world-class museums dot the city as well, including Martin-Gropius Bau, Neue Nationalgalerie (designed by Mies van der Rohe) and the Pergamon Museum.If historical relics and highbrow art aren't exactly your thing, keep an eye on the sky, as a large number of the city's buildings - both new and old - are covered in impressive works of graffiti, by many well-known street artists. Also see: Berlinische Galerie, we Collectors Eroom, Bauhaus Archiv, Hamburger BahnhofCoffee: westberlin Friedrichstraße 215 10969 Berlin-MitteTake a breather to consider the city's chequered past and bright future appropriately titled Westberlin. This cosy café is located in A checkpoint on the edge of Charlie, crossing the former Cold War border between West and East Berlin. A light snack of full wheat bread, soft honey cheese and beetroot spread next to a cup of coffee should keep you over until lunchtime in the canal kreuzberg. Also check out: Bonanza Coffee Heroes, Cuccuma, Silo Coffee, The BarnShopping: Voo Stone Oranienstrasse 24 10999 Berlin-KreuzbergAs a hotspot Berlin, creativity finds itself in a peculiar position just 25 years after the fall of the Wall. While the city may not be wealthy, a certain chic of edginess manifests itself through its residents' approach to fashion. As such, you will find everything from streetwear to conceptual, avant-garde fashion to your streets, with something for everyone in between. Most shopping can be done in the Mitte area around Weinmeisterstraße, although more and more boutiques are starting to call Kreuzberg and Neukölln their homes. Out oft-told-about-but-rarely visited in the West, you'll find Kaufhaus des Westens, better known as KaDeWe. With 60,000 square feet of space, this multi-storey department store is the largest in continental Europe. It is alongside the equally impressive Kurfürsten Damm, or KuDamm, which offers many large flagship stores known as international brands. In addition to the zoologischer Garten you will find Bikini Berlin - the city's newest designer retail complex, featuring upper boundary boutiques in an impeccably finished modern environment. Also see: SOTO, Firmament, Andreas Murkudis, 14 oz, Solebox, Civilian, No 74, You Count Me?, Wood WoodLunch: Cocolo Paul-Lincke-Ufer 39 10119 Berlin-KreuzbergOnce you have had your fix shopping day, head over to the canal to enjoy the authentic ramen experience of Cocolo. There are two locations in Berlin, only kreuzberg restaurant open for lunch, so you have no choice but to enjoy your kitchen along the coastline. When sitting, we recommend miso tantanmen for a heartwarming, salty experience. See also: Shiso Burger, DUDU, Chipperfield Kantine, Meggy & Meltzer, Berlin Burger International, District MoPark: Tempelhofer Feld Columbiadamm 12099 Berlin-TempelhofAfter lunch, head over to one of Berlin's most unique offerings: Flughafen Tempelhof. Formerly the world's largest man-made structure, the airport played host to Berlin's Airlift, providing a besieged West's 2.5 million inhabitants with everything they needed for one of the greatest achievements in aviation history. Now amazingly, the airfield is transformed into a park and is open to everyone to enjoy in its entirety - including the former runways. Hidden grasshopper areas you'll find in historic aircraft, while away hangars offer yet another impressive sight if you're up for a little exploration. See also: ViktoriaPark, Görlitzer Park, Hasenheide, Tiergarten Dinner: Katz Orange Bergstraße 22 10115 Berlin-MitteAfter a quick snack stop back it's time to go out to one of the most impressive restaurant rooms in town. Katz Orange serves classic European dishes with a modern twist. Daily specials rub shoulders with local, organic main courses with a varied menu that is something for everyone in the opulent but rustic surroundings. Also see: Grill Royal, eins4, Kimchi PrincessBar: John Muir Skalitzer Straße 51 10997 Berlin-KreuzbergAfter dinner, it's back down to Kreuzberg for a taste of Berlin's famous nightlife. Located on one of the district's most popular streets, John Muir, named after a Scottish-American naturalist, mixes with both local favorites and seasonal cocktails. After a long, hot day, we recommend Cool Runnings. Also check out: Das Hotel, Geist im Glas, Natharja & Heinrich, Odessa, Schwarze Traube, TierClub: Prince Charles Prinzenstraße 65f 10969 Berlin-Kreuzbergif you're well in the mood, it's time to head through the night and discover how infinite possibilities are in a city like Berlin. Prince Charles is known for both hip-hop and house music line-up, which hosted all-night parties across the dance floor, which was an old pool. The large 360-degree bar keeps drinks flowing, while the outdoor area offers a more relaxing atmosphere when the music becomes too much. Also see: Watergate, Chalet, Ritter Butzke, Berghain (sometimes called the Church, as locals tend to go on Sunday), about, empty, Chester's, Farbfernseher, Golden GateHangover Brunch: California Breakfast Slam Innstraße 47 12045 Berlin-NeuköllnWaking up slowly and let's face it, most likely hungover, the only thing you need to remember is food - and only California Breakfast, or Cabslam, whether you'll find food that's clearly California. South American-inspired treats are associated with classic West Coast offerings, one of the most delicious dining experiences you can experience in the German capital - Cali native or otherwise! Best of all, each dish is served all day long, so no matter what time you get it over you get the chance to make a special dish that catches your eye. It's off the chance you accidentally miss your flight, at night Cabslam turns into a bar that offers up homemade cocktails with your classic burgers, a late night treat every hour. Once you've stuffed your face and said goodbye, it's time to say goodbye to Berlin. The main starting points are the same as the points of arrival: Hauptbahnhof (trains), Flughafen Schönefeld and Flughafen Tegel (planes). All points are available by public transport, but if you're lagging slightly behind after a day of activity it's probably best to pay and take a taxi to avoid a transition. After that, all that's left is to count on a no-go trip (a good itinerary) and a tender in the city of Auf Wiedersehen!
